Putting it into practice

This resource has been developed for people who are planning or developing public involvement in research or wishing to broaden their practice. It provides useful information on 'how to do it'. It includes published guidance on good practice and reports of the lessons learnt from direct experience of involvement.

Search the online library below, read more about the library or tell us about documents and references you think should be included.

If you are interested in references on the evidence for public involvement in research visit our Evidence library.

To search the online library, you can select as many of the boxes as you like within each category. Searching using more than one category will identify all records with any of the selected options. See our search help page for more information.
